A Jungian Wandering into Ancient Western Mystery Traditions

*Walking the Camino de Santiago
May 12-25, 2007*

Hosted by The Seattle Jung Society

Furthermore, we have not even to risk the adventure alone, for the heroes [heroines] of all time have gone before us. The labyrinth is thoroughly known. We have only to follow the thread of the hero path, and where we had thought to find an abomination, we shall find a god. And where we had thought to slay another, we shall slay ourselves. Where we had thought to travel outward, we will come to the center of our own existence. And where we had thought to be alone, we will be with all the world.

All across the globe, there is a revival of interest in ancient pilgrimage routes and disciplines. This introductory journey-of-exploration will attempt to illustrate some of the mystery tradition origins of this contemplative practice and idea in the West through an actual experience on an ancient pilgrimage path. We will walk together on the last one hundred kilometers of the fabled Camino de Santiago.

Think of how free I am. If I want to travel, I just stand up and walk away.

Peace Pilgrim

Depth psychology is a pilgrimage psychology—the devotional journeys after Individuation are fascinating both within the individual Psyche and within the collective Psyche. Jung found such peregrinations as he wandered the earth his whole career. He found outer grounding for the inner journeying. It is hoped that this pilgrimage will elucidate that same inner spiraling-after-depth in each of us as participants.

Pilgrims are persons in motion passing through territories not their own--seeking something we might call completion, or perhaps the word clarity will do as well, a goal to which only the spirit's compass points the way. H. Reinhold Niebuhr

We will walk an ancient path across verdant Galicia—once sacred to ancient Celtic gods and then to the deep mystical stirrings in all three current western monotheistic traditions. This pilgrimage possibility seems especially urgent given the religious war currently being waged between the three ancient Western Monotheisms—all traditions with strong pilgrimage practices built on top of forgotten Goddess practices. Can pilgrimage bring something toward planetary peace and healing as well as individual psycho-spiritual growth? This trip commences with that desire and vision.
